

The Medicine Group Welcomes Intern Jacqueline Luthcke

New Hope, PA – June, 2016.

The Medicine Group (TMG), an independently-owned medical communications agency with offices in New Hope, PA announced this week the addition of Arcadia University student Jacqueline Luthcke as a Publications Intern. Jacqueline joins TMG's medical information services division and will bring her research, writing, and public health experience to the agency's medical affairs department.

Jacqueline is an ascending senior majoring in Global Public Health at Arcadia University. Her academic interests include international access to medicine, epidemiology, and coordinated care delivery in the developing world. She recently completed a semester long project in global public health research and will bring her analytic skills and research acumen to TMG's medical information services team.

Before joining The Medicine Group, Jacqueline worked in customer service, undergraduate recruiting, and vendor management. Her wide experience will allow her to coordinate a number of ongoing projects, including literature research, graphic design, content creation, and database management at TMG.

"We're excited to have Jacqueline join us in medical information," said Information Services Manager Susan Croce. "Her demonstrated research ability, technical skills, and desire to learn more are great assets and will help our research team tremendously."

About The Medicine Group

The Medicine Group (TMG) is an independently-owned healthcare communications agency specializing in the development and implementation of global, strategic medical commercialization plans. With decades of experience in publication planning and medical communications, the teams at TMG are focused on the needs of our healthcare clients and focus on excellence in scientific acumen, tactical delivery, and dedicated service.